

News

Top Stories

Malaysia

Southeast Asia

World

Business

Technology

Sports

Entertainment

Science

Health

Search this story

iodine

Go

Sorted by relevance

Sorted by date

Reset options

Full coverage

Call for Maternal Iodine Supplementation in UK

Medscape - 10 hours ago

Universal iodine supplementation during pregnancy and breastfeeding increases a child's intelligent quotient (IQ) by 1.22 points and saves the UK National Health Service (NHS) £200 per pregnant woman and society nearly £4500 per person, indicates a ...

Iodine supplements might raise the UK's IQ, but jury still out

New Scientist - Aug 10, 2015

Could taking iodine pills in pregnancy help to raise children's IQ? Some researchers suggest women in the UK should take such supplements, but others say the evidence is unclear, and that it could even harm development. Iodine is found in dairy foods ...

Iodine supplements could help mums, babies and the economy

NHS Choices - Aug 10, 2015

"Providing pregnant women with iodine supplements could boost children's intelligence and save thousands of pounds in future health costs," The Daily Telegraph reports. Iodine is a chemical element found in seawater, rocks and some types of soil.

All Pregnant Women Should Take Iodine Supplements To Boost Child's IQ And Cut ...

Headlines & Global News - 8 hours ago

A recent study estimates giving all pregnant women in the United Kingdom iodine supplements could save £200 per expectant mother and provide £4500 in monetary societal benefits per child from increased lifetime earnings, the University of Birmingham ...

Taking iodine can increase child's IQ and help development during early months

Daily Mail - Aug 10, 2015

Giving pregnant women a simple supplement would boost babies' brain power and make billions for the economy, experts say. Iodine helps brain development, particularly in the womb and first months, and improves children's IQ. Unlike other nations, food ...

Pregnancy iodine pills 'good for babies and economy'

BBC News - Aug 9, 2015

Recommending iodine supplements to all pregnant women could save the NHS money, say researchers. A study in The Lancet concluded that if all pregnant women took a daily dose, it could boost children's IQ scores, causing health improvements. Iodine is ...

Take iodine in pregnancy to raise baby's IQ

The Times (subscription) - 10 hours ago

Expectant mothers should be given iodine supplements to boost their children's IQs and save the NHS money, a study has found. Introducing the policy could save the health service £199 per pregnant woman because of the health benefits it would bring, ...

Iodine supplements during pregnancy could save the state money, says new research

The Independent - Aug 9, 2015

According to new research the NHS could save around £200 per child if it gave small doses of iodine to expectant and breastfeeding mothers. The findings suggest the wider benefits to society could be worth around £4,500 for every child due to the ...

Iodine Supplements for Pregnant Women Could Save $$

MedPage Today - Aug 10, 2015

Researchers analyzed clinical data to determine the cost of iodine supplementation for pregnant women; they then compared the costs to the money saved from both a health and societal perspective after the heightened IQ that can accompany ...

Iodine supplements for pregnant women could boost IQ and save NHS thousands

Telegraph.co.uk - Aug 10, 2015

Even mild iodine deficiency is associated with children with lower IQs
Photo: ALAMY. According to new research, the wider benefits to society could be worth around £4,500 for every child due to the likeliness these children would earn more and cost the ...

Some Doctors now Advise that Pregnant Women Should Consider Iodine Supplements

Pioneer News - 11 hours ago

Studies indicate that nearly 2 billion people and approximately 241 million school-age children (between the ages of 6 and 12) across 32 countries are reported to have iodine deficiency. This is what led researchers to believe that the supplement of ...

Iodine supplements in pregnancy 'would save NHS cash'

OnMedica - 14 hours ago

A previous UK study of around 1,000 pregnant women, published in 2013, found that around two-thirds could be classed as mildly to moderately deficient in iodine. Lower levels of iodine during pregnancy were subsequently linked with slightly poorer IQ ...

Pregnant Women should take Iodine Supplements

Uncover California - 13 hours ago

It is important for pregnant women to have iodine as it helps boost babies' brain power. Iodine helps brain development of child particularly in the womb and in the first months. Therefore, pregnant and breastfeeding mothers should be encouraged to ...

Universal iodine supplementation during pregnancy could offer huge cost savings

Medical Xpress - Aug 10, 2015

Giving all pregnant women iodine supplements, even in mildly iodine deficient countries like the UK, could result in huge cost savings for health care systems and society, according to new modelling research published in The Lancet Diabetes ...

The Lancet Diabetes & Endocrinology: Universal iodine supplementation during ...

EurekAlert (press release) - Aug 9, 2015

The new estimates suggest that introducing iodine supplementation in pregnancy in the UK could save the National Health Service (NHS) around £200 per expectant mother and provide monetary benefits to society of around £4500 per child from increased ...

Pregnant Women Taking Iodine Supplements Likely To Have Child With Higher IQ

Jobs & Hire - 4 hours ago

(Photo : Getty Images/Ian Waldie) Good news for pregnant women who looked forward to having a child with higher IQ, taking iodine supplements may boost a child's intelligence and save large amounts of money in future health expenditures, according to ...

Iodine Supplementation During Pregnancy Could Boost the Child's IQ

NDTV - Aug 10, 2015

Iodine Supplementation During Pregnancy Could Boost the Child's IQ

Women who take iodine supplements before and during pregnancy are likely to have kids with higher IQ and better health which could ultimately lead to huge cost savings for health care ...

Every mother-to-be should take iodine to boost baby's brain

Daily Times - Aug 10, 2015

Study author Professor Kate Jolly, from the University of Birmingham, said, "It's time for all women living in iodine-deficient countries without universal supplementation of iodine, who are pregnant, breastfeeding, or planning a pregnancy to be ...

Call for iodine supplements during pregnancy

Nursing Times - Aug 10, 2015

They estimate that introducing iodine supplementation in pregnancy could save the NHS around £200 per expectant mother and provide monetary benefits to society of around £4,500 per child from increased lifetime earnings and lower public sector costs.

Iodine supplements during pregnancy may boost kids' IQ

The Siasat Daily - 19 hours ago

London :Giving women iodine supplements during pregnancy could boost their children's IQ and also result in cost savings worth millions for the society and health care systems, a new UK study has found. The new estimates suggest that introducing iodine ...

Iodine pills in pregnancy could help babies and save money, study suggests

Nursing in Practice - Aug 10, 2015

Daily iodine supplements for pregnant and lactating women could boost their child's IQ and save the NHS money, new research has found. Iodine - mainly found in milk, dairy and fish - is important for healthy brain development and pregnant women need an ...

Are iodine supplements needed in pregnancy?

WebMD.Boots.com - Aug 10, 2015

10th August 2015 – New research concludes that all pregnant women should be offered a daily iodine supplement to boost babies' IQ and improve health. However, the study focussed on the economic benefits of iodine and some experts have questioned ...

Iodine Might Boost Your Unborn Baby's IQ

Mirror Daily - 16 hours ago

A new study has concluded that, for pregnant or breastfeeding women, taking a supplement of iodine might boost your unborn baby's IQ and improve both their lives and the nationwide economy. A small amount of iodine has been found to provide a ...

Iodine supplementation in pregnancy is good for the child's IQ

The Wiire (blog) - Aug 10, 2015

Women who consume iodine before and during the pregnancy term will be lucky to have kids with a higher IQ level compared to other kids. This in turn would also help to keep kids in better health, thus reducing the visits to the doctor. Iodine ...

Pregnant women 'should take iodine to boost baby's IQ'

Gloucestershire Echo - Aug 10, 2015

If pregnant women took iodine, it would boost babies' brain power and make billions for the economy, experts say. Unlike other nations, food in the UK is not fortified with iodine and supplements are not recommended by the NHS. But iodine helps brain ...

Iodine supplements for pregnant women in the UK could save NHS money and boost ...

Day Nurseries - Aug 10, 2015

The mineral iodine is important for healthy brain development and there is evidence that the UK population may not be getting enough. Severe iodine deficiency during pregnancy can cause substantial mental impairment and delayed development in children ...

Iodine Supplementation in Pregnancy Can Have Lasting Cost Savings

Monthly Prescribing Reference (registration) - Aug 10, 2015

(HealthDay News) — Iodine supplementation is potentially cost saving for pregnant women in the United Kingdom, according to a review published online August 9 in The Lancet Diabetes & Endocrinology. Mark Monahan, from the University of Birmingham in ...

Iodine Supplementation in Pregnancy Cost Saving in UK

Doctors Lounge - Aug 10, 2015

Mark Monahan, from the University of Birmingham in the United Kingdom, and colleagues conducted a systematic review to examine the cost-effectiveness of iodine supplementation versus no supplementation for pregnant women in a mildly to moderately ...

Iodine Supplements for Pregnant Women Could Boost IQ

Brooklyn Reader - Aug 10, 2015

A paper published in The Lancet found 67 per cent of British women suffered from a mild to moderate deficiency Providing pregnant women with iodine supplements could boost children's intelligence and save thousands of pounds in future health costs, ...

Iodine Supplementation During Pregnancy Would Increase Childhood IQs, Reduce Costs

Medical Research News and Interviews on MedicalResearch.com (blog) - Aug 10, 2015

Response: The UK is amongst 32 countries worldwide with evidence of iodine deficiency. Severe iodine deficiency during pregnancy is associated with a lower intelligence quotient (IQ) and developmental abnormalities in the children; these are reversible ...

1 2 Next

The selection and placement of stories on this page were determined automatically by a computer program. The time or date displayed reflects when an article was added to or updated in Google News.

RSS - Other News Editions - About Google News - About Feeds - Blog - Help - Send Feedback - Privacy - Terms of Use

©2015 Google - Google Home - Advertising Programs - Business Solutions - About Google